The plot twists and the side characters are all great. My favorite was the prison escape section. I like the feeling of wandering through a world and trying to figure out what's going on. There were a few liberties taken that might bother some. "The government is corrupt", the girl was married to a jackal and someone stole her heart. But it's a movie that kept me interested.A prominent Virginia state senator plans to introduce a bill this week to restrict abortions in cases of fetal deformity or where the woman's physical health is at risk, according to The Washington Post. In an interview with the Post, Senator Janet Howell (R) said she hopes the bill will become the subject of debate in Virginia's upcoming gubernatorial and legislative elections. "The goal here is not just to prevent abortions, but to talk about what life is, how life should be protected," Howell told the Post. More than half a dozen Republican state legislators have signed on as cosponsors for the proposed bill, which would make a third trimester abortion illegal if performed for fetal deformity or if the woman's physical health is at risk. The prophylactic antiemetic activity of combinations of triazinone antiemetics with antihistamines or benzamides was studied in both acute (repeated emetic doses of cisplatin, aprepitant) and delayed (single-dose emetogen) emesis models in rats. Trazodone alone or in combination with the triazinone antiemetics haloperidol or cyproheptadine was used as an antihistamine/benzamide. The primary endpoints were the number of emesis episodes and time to emesis. When administered once a day for 5 days, aprepitant, alone or in combination with cyproheptadine or tritrazine, significantly reduced cisplatin-induced emesis in both acute and delayed models.
